Art Unit: 2653

In response to applicant's letter dated October 30, 2003. The following action is taken:

The claims are rejected for the same reasons set forth in the previous office action mailed June 26, 2003 repeated herein.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 3 and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hamaguchi et al (5422867).

The claims merely read on a program within the CPU to control the track seeking operation in an optical disk apparatus. The reference shows an optical disk recording and reproducing apparatus wherein a track seek operation is controlled to position the optical head on a target track comprising a microprocessor 42 to control the seek operation, an error signal generating means reading on a (tracking error signal (inherently present), or positional signal between the current track and the target track) see column 4 lines 1-30 showing a different signal (error signal) between a current track and a target positional track on the disk, periodic signal generating means corresponding to drive the carriage during the seek operation column 4 lines 29 and 30 showing the use of a table, a duty ration changing means based on an error signal (speed signal corresponding to the distance error signal) and the table signal (periodic signal) column 8 lines 35-50 drive signal control means 54 and supply means 40.

With respect to the limitation of claim 3. The claim read on any periodic or clock signal with infinite range.

Claims 2 and 4-20 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

None of the cited prior art shows changing the duty ratio based on the difference between the max and min value of the error signal to produce the periodic signal or generating a drive signal based on a partial error signal and the changed periodic signal as claimed.

Applicant's arguments filed October 30, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's arguments are centered around the prior art not showing "a positional determination of an optical beam spot relative to the target position". However such argument is not supported nor claimed in the claimed invention. The claimed invention is drawn to changing the duty ration based on an generic "error signal" which could be a tracking, speed difference, positional ...etc error signal. In addition the argument drawn to the duty ration change object is not supported nor claimed in response to applicant's argument drawn to the prior art not showing "error signal producing means for producing an error signal showing an error between a related position of the optical beam on the recording medium and a position of the track". Such limitation is inherently present in an optical disk since the limitation is basically the tracking error signal definition and since a tracking error is a most in any optical disk apparatus in order to be operational such limitation is inherently present.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CAR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CAR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
